Summer Gaiety Shows Serious Note

By MILDRED MARSHALL KOONCE.

WITH a quiet wedding or two, a few informal parties, and the continued exodus of the smart folk, the coming week at the Capital may be dismissed briefly, and attention turned to the activities of smart worlds elsewhere. Newport, for instance, is planning an elaborate charity fete; Bar Harbor has organized a series of sewing sessions which shall provide clothing and bandages for the war sufferers; Lenox, Narragansett, Atlantic City, and the other summer colonies are providing a galaxy of diversions, both grave and gay, for the weary and jaded who come in search of social rejuvenation.

It is interesting to observe how the serious note occasioned by the war becomes increasingly evident in the midst of light summer frivolities. Society at its playgrounds has not forgotten the sufferers abroad, and charity benefits, sewing, knitting, and bandage-making are still as popular with the fashionable folk as in the early days of the war. Newport will evidence this interest on Saturday when all the summer colony will be occupied with the big outdoor fete to be given for the benefit of the impoverished Belgian refugees in France. Practically all the summer residents have pledged their support and personal assistance. The loveliest women in Newport are preparing to appear in Fashion's Passing Show, which promises to be an affair of superb color and beauty, and will be presented in the afternoon and evening on the marble terrace of Rosecliff, Mrs. Herman Oelrichs' handsome villa. Such prominent names as Mrs. Whitney Warren, Mrs. Ogden Mills, Mrs. Hamilton Fish Webster, Miss Maud Wetmore, and Miss Gabrielle Warren appear on the committee.

There will be a pageant of the nations, too, in which Newport's most beautiful women will represent the neutral powers. During the day, which will be known as "Secours National Day," the pretty maids of the younger set will sell tiny red, white, and blue boutonnieres at the Golf Club, the Casino, and other of Newport's fashionable haunts. Dinner parties will be the vogue for the evening, though society has refrained from entertainments which will occupy the hours of the charity performances, that every one may attend the fete. Mrs. Horatio N. Slater will be among the dinner hostesses, when she will entertain a number of distinguished guests at her summer villa.

In Bar Harbor, the relief work will continue steadily, though without such ambitious display. Mrs. Hunt Slater, Mrs. W. C. Cushman, and Mrs. Victor Cushman are among the prominent Washington women who have volunteered to devote an hour a week to the good cause of sewing and making bandages for the sufferers in the war zone of the allied armies. The Bar Harbor High School has been made the headquarters of the relief committee and is the scene of a distinguished assemblage on several afternoons a week.

At the other resorts there is the usual round of dancing, golfing, tennis, and cabaret teas. The first dance of the season in the Casino at Lenox attracted large numbers of the society folk of the Capital, and at the

Weddings & Engagements

The wedding of Miss Katharine Alice Page, daughter of Ambassador and Mrs. Walter Hines Page, of London and New York, and Mr. Charles Greeley Loring, of Boston, has been set for August 4. It was to have taken place in the Henry Seventh Chapel of Westminster Abbey, but King George offered the Chapel Royal in St. James's Palace, and the ceremony will take place there in the forenoon. It is understood that this is the first time that two Americans will have been married in that Chapel Royal.

The Queen and King will not be present, as they attend no social function during the war.

Owing to the war, the invitations to the church will be limited to the family, the most of friends, and the heads of the diplomatic corps. The wedding breakfast afterward will be at the embassy, Grosvenor Square.

As trans-Atlantic travel is so uncertain, the list of bridesmaids and ushers is not determined, but Miss Frances Leggett, of Stratford, and Miss Joan Cavendish Bentinck, also of England, will be among Miss Page's attendants. The best man will be Mr. Frank C. Page, of Pinehurst, N. C. One of the ushers will be Lieut. Louis McBride, a naval attaché at the embassy and a classmate of the bridegroom at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and another will be Mr. Harold Fowler, of New York, formerly Ambassador Page's private secretary and now lieutenant in the Royal Artillery, if he can get leave.

After a honeymoon in England the winter will be spent at 8 Otis place, the Loring Boston house.

Miss Page was graduated from Bryn Mawr College in 1912, where she was president of her class. Her brothers are Mr. Ralph W. Page, who married Miss Lella Tuckerman, of Brookline, and whose home is now in Pinehurst, N. C.; Mr. Arthur W. Page, a partner in the firm of Doubleday, Page & Co., whose home is at Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, and who married Miss Molly Hall, of Milton, Mass., and Mr. Frank C. Page, a planter in North Carolina.

Mr. Loring is the son of Gen. and Mrs. Charles G. Loring, who for twenty-five years was director of the Museum of Fine Arts. Mrs. Loring died while traveling in India a year and a half ago. The bridegroom was graduated from Harvard in 1902, and from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1906, and then studied in Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris for about three years. He is now living in Boston where he is in business.

An interesting engagement announced last week was that of Miss Vittoria Maria Tittoni, sister of Lieut. Robert Renato Tittoni, U. S. M. C., of this city, and daughter of Signor Carlo and Signora Toni (Countess) Alzina Alberti, of Rome, Italy, to Ensign John Laurence Rihelidaffer, U. S. N. Miss Tittoni is also a niece of Signor Tommaso Tittoni, the Italian Ambassador to France.

No date has been set for the wedding, but it will take place shortly after the completion of Ensign Rihelidaffer's examination for promotion to lieutenant (junior grade).
